

Educating children to love to learn, creating a path for success. Changing the future by changing the present.

The education Sector in The United States has been federalized up until March 2025, an executive order from the president Donald Trump gave the power of the department of education to each state.

This will bring more autonomy to states to see the needs, make changes, better existing programs and create solutions for the future of education in the state. Each school and students are different from others. No education program fits all. So this new approach is very important and will impact the lives of the generations to come, the state and the country as a whole. It will also spill over to other countries and the world. Possibly. We need to adjust the needs of the students to the reality of the present in their schools and life.

Below is a TED Talk video from 11 years ago, but it is relevant to today and explains why it's so important that Education remains in the power of the state.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vY2l2xfDBcE>